Sign up to take the ASVAB

Why?

Dear ASVAB CEP,
I'm a junior in high school, and honestly, I'm tired of taking tests. I heard that 10th, 11th, and 12th graders should sign up for the ASVAB. Something about the test helping us find careers but I've heard the military uses it as a recruiting tool. So, I actually have 2 questions. Exactly what is the ASVAB? And why should I take it?
Sincerely, Stressed with Tests

Dear Stressed With Tests,
We get it. High school students are bombarded by tests, and it's ok if you're wondering, "Why take the ASVAB test?". Your time is valuable. We know you're busy with homework, extracurricular activities, family obligations, and maybe a part-time job. But the truth is, the ASVAB is worth your time, and here's why:
The ASVAB Explained The ASVAB is an aptitude test, so it doesn't measure your achievement or what you've learned. Instead, it measures your developed abilities in math, science, verbal skills, mechanical comprehension, assembling objects, and auto and shop skills. So unlike the SAT, ACT, or most classroom tests, the ASVAB will give you an idea of your strengths in areas outside of academics. You might discover a strength you never knew you had, which could lead to career fields you may not have ever considered. Your ASVAB scores will help narrow down careers that are right for you. The ASVAB measures abilities and skills in many areas. So, your scores help predict future success in academics, jobs, and ALL career fields – not just those in the military. Taking the ASVAB is the first step to finding your dream job.

What do my results mean?
Your results sheet provides a measure of your skills and abilities with different scores:
Career Exploration Scores. The three Career Exploration Scores are verbal, math, and science/technical skills. Each of these scores is made up of a combination of some of the individual ASVAB tests.
ASVAB Tests. You receive a score for each subtest that makes up the ASVAB. See the chart below to learn more about each subtest.
Military Entrance Score/Armed Forces Qualification Test (AFQT). Participation in the ASVAB CEP does not obligate you to talk with military recruiters or consider a military career. If you are interested in joining the Military it is best to discuss this score with a recruiter. Learn more at www.careersinthemilitary.com.
